Attending this annual show is like walking through a bustling sound stage. Like any horse show, there is continuous and purposeful movement: horses being led out to the warm up, horses trotting into the arena, horses being exercised, horses being moved in stalls, horses being moved out of wash racks ... but at this show, the lavish costumes, theatrical props, and full-out “sets” say HOLLYWOOD. When the people of the big, black horses get together, get ready for an MGM-style grand time.

The sets

They came from California, Colorado, Michigan, New Jersey, Kentucky, Texas and beyond ... but from October 28 to November 1, “home” was in Lake St. Louis, Missouri for the IFSHA World and Grand National Championship event. Down the main aisle, the elaborate décor of some barns looked more like camera-ready family room sets than stables. Koreen Greenberg welcomed all with ample seating, carpeting and even a working (albeit electric) fireplace. The décor of Heirloom Show Horses inspired serenity with a gurgling fountain and comfortable seating, as did the décor of Friesian Focus. As usual, Friesian Focus also went all out with tombstones, rats, bats and skeletons — all standing sentry to their VIP lounge, which was curtained off in one of the stalls. Siren Song Stables added their own signature style to the mix with pink party lights, black mulch and colorful pinky purple mums to compliment their pink and black color scheme. Griffin Sport Horses went for a more traditional stabling area by day but after each evening’s classes, they carried out soft, cozy rented couches to the main aisle for some well-deserved rest and relaxation. Some “sets” actually looked like horse show scenery as well, such as a simply curtained tack room and a few folding lawn chairs.

Bruce Griffin, in the tandem class.

Family room with fireplace.

The camaraderie at the IFSHA show is second to none. Although fiercely competitive in the show ring, the exhibitors seem to leave the competition within the gates.

"I was very happy and pleasantly surprised by the warmth and help we received from fellow competitors, like Bruce Griffin, Paul Bricco and Steven Stiller," said Jo Shouse of Black Dragon Farm. This feeling of cooperation resounded throughout the barn. Stabled across from junior exhibitors Austyn Kent, and Brielle and Tori Stevens of Premier Friesians, Brenda Wendt exclaimed, "It was a true pleasure to be stabled across from this wonderful group of dedicated parents and their three sweet, honest, hard working young ladies, who are outstanding examples of true sportsmanship and devotion to their love of their horses and family."

Whether a few simple comforts or an elaborately embellished set, over the course of this show, the individual barns melded into a main aisle that was more like one big, continuous family room.

Cast parties

Not only were there places to sit, relax, and mingle throughout the show, several nights featured a barn-sponsored party. On Thursday night, Siren Song Stables poured margaritas and offered a light supper. Friesian Focus popped the champagne corks after Friday night's classes and offered a post-show celebration of bubbly and delectable French pastries. On Saturday night, Black Dragon Farms poured wine and offered up a supper buffet.

The generously laden tables of food and drink were a welcome sight and a fitting end to the full schedules of classes — the perfect opportunity to mingle with other exhibitors and trainers.

The stage

There is something awe-inspiring about the National Equestrian Center in Lake St. Louis, Missouri. It is not the largest horse show facility, nor is it the most grand, but the NEC is a great place to come together for a horse show. The flags of our 50 states drape from the center roofline, silently acknowledging both our diversity of backgrounds and our unity of purpose.

Every seat is close to the action, lending an air of excitement and participation — especially during the liberty classes. Is that stallion going to come to a stop in time or should I scramble out of my seat now?!?

Improv

For the Hollywood types, it's improv; for the Friesians, it's Liberty classes. No saddle. No script. Just a solo performance of a horse being a horse. Some Liberty highlights included Cassandra Adams presenting owner Jill Hegna's Niko to the World Champion Friesian Liberty Stallion title. Cassandra made another winning liberty appearance with Jason Stott's Ynse, World Champion Friesian Liberty Gelding. Brittney Shibus's mare, Marikjke fan't Suderein was the World Champion Liberty Mare, shown by trainer Kim Vogel of Heirloom Show Horses.

The action

This show brings together several disciplines, including dressage, hunter, western, saddle seat, and several driving variations. One of the most anticipated classes was Saturday night's English Pleasure Saddle Seat Open. Six entries stormed through the gate to put on an exciting display of immense power, tempered with grace and elegance. One of the leading roles at this show was played by Gooitzen fan Teakesyl, owned by Annika Bruggeworth of Siren Song Stables. Over the course of the week, this grand gelding went three for three. When he was named World Champion Friesian English Please Saddle Seat Open on Saturday night, “the Gootz” recorded his 26th successive victory. Close on his heels was Reserve Grand Champion Onne, owned by Susan Swope and trained by Clarke Vesty. This smart mover, making his IFSHA World & Grand Nationals debut, caught the attention of many admiring fans. Susan Swope commented, “For one with a long background in Saddlebreds and sport horses, yet fairly new to this breed, it was a phenomenal experience to see so many quality Friesians under one roof exhibiting the beauty, versatility and natural talent that continually takes my breath away.”

The costumes

The dazzling costume classes

showcased another kind of breathtaking beauty. Granted, this show occurs over the Halloween weekend, but the costume classes at the IFSHA show include not only the fantasy costume classes, which are limited only by imagination, but also the more meticulously scored armor classes and period costume classes. Shirley Whirley, aboard her horse Karst van de Oliftak, was named World Champion Friesian Period Costume, resplendent in a forest green velvet dress trimmed in gold. Notably, Shirley crafted the costume herself, as well as the garnet and gold costume worn by the Reserve Champion, Leah Copas aboard Seona vV. Jennifer Hazen and Joshua of the Friesian Connection won the World Champion Friesian Armored Costume title this year. Reserve Championship title went to Jo Shouse’s Sietscke S. ridden by Ron Steinbrenner. The fantasy costume class comprised 10 entries, ranging from a sweet fairy to a black dragon and everything in between. Sue Watkins’ Gideon, ridden by Justin Robertson of W Highland Stable, took top honors with a tribute to the old TV show, Hee Haw. Reserve honors went to the elegantly Arabian-attired Joan Fernandez and Daen, from Friesian Focus.

Ending credits

Aside from the beautiful yellow rose championship sashes, this show boasts gorgeously fringed tricolor ribbons and sashes — only fitting for classes requiring authentic full armor, elaborate costumes and gorgeously gleaming carriages to perfectly compliment the splendor of the big black horse. But no matter the props, the costumes, or the sets, the success of this large-scale production is due to a cadre of dedicated people. “I really was impressed by how knowledgeable and helpful the office staff was. Coupled with the gate work, it made a long show go quickly and smoothly,” commented Jo Shouse. Susan Swope added, “the show was well-run and great fun; and, my understanding is that it was by an all-volunteer staff. I’d have never known. I very much look forward to next year.”

“Overall, this was probably the most successful show I’ve managed in terms of people having a good time and volunteer participation. I think everyone came away happy,” stated Gareth Selwood, Show Manager. The great big family room has long since returned to its more humble barn identity; the horses and people returned to their real homes; and the 2009 show season has drawn to a close.

Until next year ... that’s a wrap.
